Sonance Scores a Double on ADEX Awards

San Clemente, CA—July 2006—Sonance, inventor of the in-wall speaker and a leading maker of high-performance loudspeakers and other components for custom-installed home media and theater systems, has garnered a pair of coveted ADEX awards—the distinction awarded by Design Journal, a leading international trade magazine catering to interior designers, architects and facility managers. Choosing from among a record 1500+ entries, Design Journal recognized Sonance's exciting new Mariner line of indoor/outdoor, environmentally rugged speakers with a Silver ADEX, and its acclaimed Symphony family of audiophile-grade in-wall & in-ceiling "architectural" designs with a Gold award.

Both awards were given in the competition's Technology category, one of more than two-dozen that span virtually every aspect of home and work-place design, decorating, improvement, and construction, in which ADEX awards are conferred.

"We're thrilled to have scored two awards in Design Journal's competition," says Sonance Chief Marketing Officer Steve Crawford. It is doubly gratifying to be recognized in this way, since the competition is judged by seasoned pros from the design and architecture worlds—precisely the audience Sonance most seeks to impress."
